Steve,

I'm leaning toward doing the Animas River work if the people on your team want that. Is there any way you could be the task monitor? (I understand if not, but it's worth a shot.) Any last minute warnings before I get in too deep? I would need them to agree to let me know in advance of any Denver meetings I would be required to attend in person and limit them to an average of one trip/month or less. I'm happy to be flexible if something unexpected comes up, but don't want to spend a lot of time going back and forth unnecessarily.
